

EXPERT SECRETS

The Underground Playbook for Finding Your Message, Building a Tribe, and Changing the World

Russell Brunson

The Big “So What”

Each of us has the potential to inspire, add value, and lead others with our unique talents and experiences. Whether you're an employee or a business owner, this book offers a blueprint to transform your knowledge into a meaningful and profitable business.

Introduction: What is an Expert Business?

There are 2 key steps to achieving true fulfillment in life:

- Grow yourself: Start by mastering a skill or area you're deeply passionate about. This could be anything from crafting potato guns to composing sheet music or fixing bicycles. Immerse yourself in the subject, and learn/apply the knowledge to the point you become a true expert in that area.
- Contribute to others: There's a limit to how much you can learn on your own. By teaching and sharing your expertise with others, you can deepen your mastery, make a meaningful impact, and make money in the process.

An expert business is about delivering impactful information products. There are two main ways to build such a business:

- Share your knowledge as an expert, by packaging it into products like courses, coaching, or consulting.
- Using information products to grow an existing business quickly:
 - (i) By educating customers on the value of your solutions, you prime them for purchase;

KEY QUOTES

“You hold in your hand the step-by-step roadmap to turning those assets into wealth and prosperity.”

“Growth is just half of what we need to have true fulfillment in life. The second half of fulfillment comes from contribution.”

“I believe the true value of an expert business isn't the money you make, but the people's lives you're able to change through your message.”

“You will get all you want in life, if you help enough other people get what they want.”
—Zig Ziglar

- (ii) By positioning yourself as an authority, you can command a higher price; and
- (iii) By attracting large numbers of prospects with free educational content, you reduce your client acquisition cost.

For example, ClickFunnels became a leading SaaS company by first offering educational products that taught marketing strategies. These products concurrently generated revenue and primed customers to use their software to implement those strategies.

In this summary, we'll be presenting the Expert Secrets system in 3 parts:

- Creating Your Mass Movement;
- Installing the Right Beliefs; and
- Monetizing Your Expertise.

Part 1: Creating Your Mass Movement

To make a meaningful impact or build a thriving business, you need a pool of engaged audience—people who trust you, resonate with your message, and are eager to follow your lead.

- A mass movement revolves around True Fans who're deeply passionate about your message. These are the people who buy from you, champion your cause, and eagerly anticipate your next offering. This starts with finding and serving the right audience.
- Every successful mass movement is built on 3 key elements:
 - (i) A charismatic leader;
 - (ii) A future-based cause; and
 - (iii) A new opportunity.

KEY QUOTES

"It's only by shifting our focus to helping others that we continue to grow."

"They say that the best time to plant a tree was 20 years ago, but the 2nd best time is right now."

"A creator, such as an artist, musician, photographer, craftsperson, performer, animator, designer, videomaker, or author—in other words, anyone producing works of art—needs to acquire only 1,000 True Fans to make a living."

"If you jump into an already existing red ocean, you'll be fighting an uphill battle. But if you create a blue ocean, you will find success so much easier."

Identify Your Niche

Define the audience for your mass movement by asking: Who do I want to serve? What unique value can I provide?

- Start with 3 core markets (Health, Wealth, or Relationships), narrow down to a submarket, then a niche. For example: Health (core market) → Nutrition (submarket) → High-fat diets (niche).

- Study competitors to identify gaps or underserved areas where you can offer a unique solution.
- Avoid a submarket/niche that's overcrowded ("red ocean"). Aim to start a new niche within an attractive submarket by presenting a new opportunity—carve out a fresh "blue ocean" with minimal competition, and an audience that'd be excited by your offering.
- Validate your niche. Ensure your audience meets 2 criteria:
 - Irrationally passionate, with signs like: existing communities, events, unique vocabulary, and established experts.
 - Willing and able to spend money i.e. they have both the enthusiasm and resources to invest in your solution.

Become a Charismatic Leader (Whom Others Follow)

Every movement begins with a charismatic leader who embodies the values, aspirations, and identity of the group they lead. People follow you because they see you as someone who's been where they are and can guide them to success.

KEY QUOTES

"You don't want to be the first celebrity in a market. You want a topic or niche with its own subculture already established."

"There are people today who need what you have."

"You don't have to be the most knowledgeable person in the world on your topic, you just have to be one chapter ahead of the people you're helping."

- If you feel inadequate as an expert, remember:
 - You don't need certifications—your results are proof of your expertise. Tony Robbins, for example, began teaching NLP before he was certified, and transformed millions of lives.
 - You don't need to be the best. You can lead your audience so long as you're 1–2 steps ahead of them.

To establish yourself as a charismatic leader:

- Be relatable and authentic. Share your transformation journey honestly. Show the human behind the expertise, including your struggles, vulnerabilities, and triumphs.
- Communicate with certainty: Certainty inspires trust. Just share your message consistently through blogs, videos, or podcasts. The more you share, the more refined and confident your message becomes.
- Share bold, polarizing ideas that capture attention and spark conversation. Aim for the “prolific zone” that’s bold but not extreme. For example, Dave Asprey became a multi-millionaire by creating Bulletproof Coffee: a mix of butter and coffee as a weight-loss method. Some people will love your idea while others will hate it—just focus on the true fans and ignore the rest.
- Persuade with emotion: Connect with your audience via storytelling, using these actionable steps from Blair Warren’s One Sentence Persuasion framework:
 - Show how your idea helps them to achieve their dreams;
 - Justify their failures by blaming outdated systems/methods.
 - Address their fears and inspire hope with relatable stories and solutions.
 - Validate their suspicions about existing solutions to make them feel understood and smart.
 - Use an us-versus-them narrative to target a common enemy (e.g. flawed systems or competitors).
- Show genuine care for their success. Remember: you’re actually helping your audience by charging for your services, since

KEY QUOTES

“The gap between where they see themselves and where they see you is what moves them to action and helps them make the necessary changes.”

“In any situation, the person with the most certainty wins.”

“If you haven’t offended someone by noon each day, then you’re not marketing hard enough.”
—Dan Kennedy

“People will do anything for those who encourage their dreams, justify their failures, allay their fears, confirm their suspicions, and help them throw rocks at their enemies.”
—Blair Warren

“They don’t care how much you know until they know how much you care.”

they're more likely to value and act on the information you provide.

- Deliver real value that matters to them, be it connection or tangible results like weight loss or financial stability.

Craft a Future-Based Cause (to Form Your CULT-ure)

 People are driven by the promise of a better future. Articulate an inspiring vision that's bigger than yourself—something that rallies your audience and motivates them to take action.

- Use clear, motivating slogans that serve as a rallying cry and show the possibilities ahead. For example, ClickFunnels created the slogan "You're Just One Funnel Away..." to inspire users to envision how a single funnel could transform their lives—be it achieving financial freedom or building a thriving business.
- Show that a seemingly-impossible goal is actually achievable. Highlight tangible milestones that other community members have achieved, e.g. ClickFunnels' "2 Comma Club" celebrates members who've earned >$1mil using their funnels. This offers proof of success others to strive toward similar goals.
- Use statements or labels that members can adopt as part of their personal brand/identity, e.g. "I'm a ____" or "I ____".
 - For example, ClickFunnels users proudly declare, "I'm a Funnel Hacker." When Brandon and Kaelin Poulin rebranded their company from "Tuell Time Trainer" to "Lady Boss," their fans started to call themselves "Lady Bosses."
- Create a "Title of Liberty"—a unifying statement or symbol that reminds your community of their purpose, identity, and actions. There are 3 ways to create this:
 - A mini-manifesto: a short, impactful phrase that captures the group's identity and purpose, e.g. "I am a Funnel Hacker. I define my destiny..."
 - A manifesto: a detailed declaration of beliefs and values explaining what the group stands for and opposes.

KEY QUOTES

"Those who pay, pay attention—and the more they pay, the closer attention they pay."

"Our job as expert and leader is to help bring people to higher ground. To move them from where they are to where they want to be."

"The certainty people get when they see someone else do something they thought was impossible, gives them the belief they need to also achieve that same goal."

"Fear of the future causes us to lean against and cling to the present, while faith in the future renders us perceptive to change."

- A visually-engaging video that summarizes the cause, who you are (and why you're different), what you stand for, who you stand against, and why your movement matters.

Introduce a New Opportunity (or the Vehicle for Transformation)

The new opportunity serves as a vehicle for transformation, offering your audience something fresh and exciting, rather than fixes or improvements to existing methods. New opportunities work because:

- People are drawn to things that improve their status, but avoid things that lower their status. Improvement-based offers remind people of past failures and shortfalls, threatening their self-esteem and status. New opportunities shift the focus from fixing old problems to embracing new possibilities—they promise progress and the chance to raise their status (e.g. feel smarter, wealthier, more successful) without the stigma of past failure.
- New opportunities create a “blue ocean” with little competition, avoiding price wars in saturated markets.

For example, Steve Jobs revolutionized the music industry by introducing the iPod—a groundbreaking device—rather than improving existing MP3 players.

There're 2 strategies to position your offer as a new opportunity:

- Opportunity switching: Introduce your audience to a completely new method/approach that gives them hope for a better future.
- Opportunity stacking: Enhance your new opportunity by offering additional tools or products to support the transformation.
- An offer can be both a switch (for beginners) and a stack (for advanced users). For example, Brunson introduced expert businesses as an opportunity switch for busy working professionals to leverage their expertise for income. He then positioned ClickFunnels as part of the opportunity stack, offering tools to implement and scale their expert businesses.

KEY QUOTES

“Status is the only thing that causes people to move toward you or not move at all.”

“Our goal is not to fix what’s not working. Our goal is to REPLACE what’s not working with something better.”

“Your job as the expert is to load up the elevated status side of the scale and decrease the risk of failure.”

“It matters less what product they are buying; it’s more important to understand that they are leaving behind whatever old beliefs they had about how to achieve their desired results and putting their hope and faith into this new opportunity.”

Follow these steps to create a new opportunity:

- Work with a small group of ideal clients for free. Aim to deliver measurable results and collect testimonials to build credibility.
- Design a six-week masterclass: Teach your audience how to achieve their desired result using the new opportunity. Treat this as a beta program to refine your ideas before targeting paying clients. Six weeks is an ideal duration, since you risk refunds for shorter periods, and may receive complaints (about time commitments) for longer ones.
- Develop marketing materials first, before designing the masterclass, to ensure your messaging is clear and relevant.
 - (i) Who/What statement: Define your audience and results, using this format: "I'll teach [specific submarket audience] how to [specific niche outcome]." For example, "I will teach introverted men how to confidently approach and attract their dream partner."
 - (ii) Opportunity switch title: Highlight the result for your masterclass in this format: "How to [result they want most] Without [pain they fear most]". For example, "How to Lose Weight Easily Without Giving Up Your Favorite Foods."
 - (iii) Curiosity hook: Use 5 compelling angles to differentiate your masterclass.
 - Little-known, big differences: Showcase a fresh, impactful concept, e.g. "There's a little-known hormone called ghrelin that controls your hunger. It can transform your weight loss journey."
 - Well-known, little understood: Expose hidden truths about familiar ideas e.g. "Everyone knows about counting calories, but few know that meal timing can turbocharge your metabolism."
 - This changes everything: Present a breakthrough that revolutionizes the market e.g. "Tired of traditional weight-loss plans? A groundbreaking approach uses personalized meal timing to reset your metabolism effortlessly."

KEY QUOTES

"Most people design the class first and then think about marketing, but that is a formula for disaster."

"By changing your positioning, you'll pull your opportunity out of a red ocean and plunk it down into a blue ocean."

KEY QUOTES

- The crystal ball theory: Frame old methods as outdated and your solution as the future e.g., “Counting calories is outdated. The future lies in personalized metabolic tracking for faster and lasting weight loss.”
- Revisiting the fundamentals: Offer a simpler alternative e.g. “Forget complicated meal plans. To lose weight sustainably, you just need to balance food portions.”
- Don’t assume you know what your audience wants/needs. Ask what they want using surveys or questions, then create targeted solutions that resonate with your audience. Remember: People buy what they want, not necessarily what they need.
 - Create a survey or ask: “What’s your #1 question about [niche/topic]?” with an incentive to respond, e.g. free access to your masterclass.
 - Share the survey with friends, Facebook groups or social media communities (but be sure to add value before asking), and/or using paid ads (for faster responses).
 - Collect 100+ answers and identify 8-10 recurring themes. Use them to craft your masterclass outline and module titles.
 - Create benefit-driven bullets for marketing, based on the audience’s language. If people are asking “What’s the best way to save time meal prepping?” and “How to stay on track when I’m busy?” then title your course “How to Prep Healthy Meals in Under 30 Minutes—Even on Your Busiest Days!”
- Deliver your free masterclass:
 - (i) Create a private Facebook group to engage participants, share updates, and provide bonuses.
 - (ii) Host sessions using platforms like Facebook Live, Zoom, or GoToWebinar.

“Because we’re the experts in our respective niches, it’s easy to assume we know what people want. And while sometimes we may be right, more often we miss the mark.”

“People don’t buy what they need, they buy what they want.”

Part 2: Installing the Right Beliefs

To persuade your audience to embrace your new opportunity, you must use masterful storytelling to transform their beliefs.

Craft a Big Domino Statement

The Big Domino is the one key idea or belief your audience must accept for them to take action without objection or hesitation.

- Use this structure for your Big Domino statement: “If [new opportunity] is the key to [what they want most] and it’s only attainable through [your specific vehicle], then all objections become irrelevant.”
 - For example: “If funnels are the key to online business success and they’re only attainable through ClickFunnels, then all objections become irrelevant.”
- If your Big Domino feels weak, you might be offering an improvement, not a new opportunity. Make sure you have a unique vehicle that replaces mainstream solutions.

Develop Epiphany Bridge Stories

Once you have a Big Domino statement, the next step is to build belief around it through storytelling. Epiphany Bridge stories help you to connect emotionally with the audience and shift their beliefs.

- People make decisions emotionally, then justify them logically. If you can lead them to experience your emotional epiphany, they will fill in the logic themselves.
- Use a backstory to recreate the breakthrough “aha” moment when you discovered the new opportunity, with additional stories to dismantle other false beliefs or objections preventing them from accepting the Big Domino.

KEY QUOTES

“Everything comes down to one thing—belief. Belief creates the customer. Belief creates the results.”

“You must persuade people to believe in what you are doing, and you do that by mastering the art of storytelling.”

“The first step to creating belief is figuring out the ONE THING you have to get someone to believe that will knock down all their other objections, make them irrelevant, or disappear altogether.”

“The first step to creating belief is figuring out the ONE THING you have to get someone to believe that will knock down all their other objections, make them irrelevant, or disappear altogether.”

“There’s a time and a place for logic, but you have to convince them emotionally first, before they’ll be excited by your logic.”

Use these tips for effective storytelling:

- Use simple, relatable language (at third-grade level).
- Describe emotions vividly so your audience can experience your breakthrough.
- Use analogies or comparisons to explain unfamiliar concepts, e.g. "Funnels are like highways that guide your customers straight to their destination."

Every good story follows a plot structure like this: "[Character] wanted to [Desire], but [Conflict]." Use this to tell the backstory of how you first got excited about the new opportunity.

- The character is the hero of the story (you or someone else). To be relatable, they should be likeable, funny, powerful, a victim of external forces, and/or in a vulnerable position.
- Desire refers to what the hero wants to achieve, which could be to:
 - (i) Gain pleasure, e.g. win love/status or retrieve something valuable.
 - (ii) Avoid pain, e.g. escaping failure or trying to stop a disaster.
- Conflict refers to the seemingly-insurmountable obstacles that create emotional tension. Most films include 5 turning points:
 - (i) New opportunity/event that triggers the hero's journey.
 - (ii) Change of plans as the hero crystallizes a clear, specific goal.
 - (iii) Point of no return, where the hero fully commits to a high-stakes situation.
 - (iv) A major setback that makes success seem impossible, but they make one final push toward a sliver of hope.

KEY QUOTES

"Using big words may make you feel smarter, but it will not influence others."

"Any time you're speaking (or writing) and you hit a friction point where some people may not understand what you're trying to convey, just say 'it's kinda like...' and relate it to something easy to understand."

"Every good story is about a captivating character who is pursuing some compelling desire and who faces seemingly insurmountable obstacles to achieving it. That's it. If you've got those three things, then you've got a good story."

—Michael Hauge

"Our primary goal as storytellers is to elicit emotion, and you can't do that without conflict."

(v) The climax, as the hero overcomes the greatest obstacle to achieve external success and internal transformation.

- A relatable and emotionally-engaging story must include 2 journeys that the hero undertakes:

(i) The Journey of Achievement: the external, tangible goal the hero seeks, e.g. "to earn enough to support my family."

(ii) The Journey of Transformation: the internal and emotional transformation the hero experiences along the way, e.g. "I overcame my limiting beliefs about money and discovered my true potential."

 Use these 8 steps to take your audience through the hero's two journeys and incorporate the elements above:

- Share your backstory to make the audience care. Show that you were once where they are now, e.g. "I was a broke college student selling potato gun DVDs to support my family."
- Share what you desire to achieve, including both external and internal struggles, e.g. "I wanted to support my wife and feel like a good husband, but I struggled to earn enough money."
- Tell the obstacles that forced you to reassess your current option, e.g. "Google ad costs skyrocketed and shut down my only income source."
- Describe the aha moment (epiphany) that revealed the new opportunity, e.g. "I discovered sales funnels and realized they could increase customer value."
- Show the plan or steps you took, e.g. "I started building funnels for profitable markets like weight loss."
- Share a conflict that tested your resolve and pushed you to the point of no return, e.g. "Funnels were costly and my success rate was low. Soon, I maxed out my credit cards and had no choice but to make the next funnel work."

KEY QUOTES

"While we want our hero to achieve his goal, it's more important that he becomes someone different along the way. There has been a death of his internal struggles and a rebirth of something more."

"When they see that you were once where they are now, they will have faith that you can take them where they want to go."

- Reveal what you achieved, e.g. "I created ClickFunnels to simplify funnel-building. It became a multi-million-dollar business that helped thousands of entrepreneurs."
- Explain how the journey transformed you, e.g. "I achieved financial freedom, discovered my purpose, refocused on my family, and helped others find success."

Address False Beliefs

After hearing your Big Domino and Epiphany Bridge backstory, your audience will still have objections rooted in 3 main false beliefs:

- Vehicle: Doubts about the viability of the new opportunity, e.g. "Funnels won't work for my business."
- Internal: Doubts about their own ability to succeed e.g. "I'm not tech-savvy enough to build a funnel."
- External: Doubts about external obstacles, e.g. "I wouldn't know how to drive traffic to a funnel."

To identify and replace these false beliefs:

- List down all the false beliefs your audience might have about your opportunity, e.g. "Losing weight means giving up food I love."
 - List down the experiences that might have led to those beliefs, e.g. "The last restrictive diet made me so miserable."
 - Sort these into vehicle, internal, and external beliefs.
 - Identify the top false belief for each category.
- Create an Epiphany Bridge story for each false belief to show how you (or someone else) overcame it. For example: "I thought weight loss meant giving up my favorite foods, but then I discovered a plan that lets me eat ice-cream while still losing weight."
- Turn each belief into a curiosity-driven secret that hooks interest, e.g. "How to Lose Weight Without Giving Up Your Favorite Foods or Counting a Single Calorie." You should

KEY QUOTES

"When I'm trying to sell someone on my new opportunity, almost instantly their subconscious mind will start thinking about all the reasons it isn't possible, or why it won't work for them. The bad news is that these beliefs can be really strong."

"If I can identify people's false beliefs and tell stories that show them the truth, I didn't need to 'sell' them anything. The stories lead people to the right belief, and they sell themselves."

"The better you get at telling the stories, the more effective you'll become at persuading others, and you'll know exactly what to say when customers bring up objections."

have 3 key secrets to counter the top vehicle, internal, and external belief.

Part 3: Monetizing Your Expertise

Having identified your audience, built a movement, and replaced false beliefs, you're now ready to turn your expertise into a sustainable business.

Create an Irresistible Offer (The Stack Slide)

Start by putting together an irresistible offer—a complete package that makes it a no-brainer for your audience to buy.

Create a "stack slide", i.e. a list of valuable items that will help your dream clients to achieve their desired results.

- Brainstorm as many options as possible, including:
 - (i) Your core offer (e.g. the Opportunity Switch masterclass);
 - (ii) Complementary tools (e.g. templates, checklists, software) to increase their chances of success;
 - (iii) Other tools or tangible assets to address false beliefs, e.g. case studies, video guides, sample scripts, and cheat-sheets to help them address internal/external obstacles; and
 - (iv) An exclusive bonus with scarcity and urgency, e.g. "First 20 to enroll before Sunday gets a 2-hr private coaching session."
- Each item has an attached value, and the combined value of the items should be 10x the value of your asking price. In short, a solution that costs $997 should deliver $\geq $9,997$ of value.

What you're gonna get...

Masterclass	($9,989 value)
Tools	($989 value)
Tangible#1	($387 value)
Tangible#2	($387 value)
Tangible#3	($387 value)
Bonus	(Priceless)
Total Value: $12,139
Price: $1,039

KEY QUOTES

"Before I ever start selling anything, my first step is to create an irresistible offer."

"If you believe in the product or service you're selling, then you have a moral obligation to try and serve your customers in every way possible."
-Jay Abraham

"Think of it not as the value you'd sell it for, but the value they get from it. What will the results from each element be worth to them?"

The Perfect Webinar Script

This is a proven 4-part framework that you can use for presentations, webinars, sales videos, or email sequences. It gets the audience to believe in the Big Domino and to take action.

Introduction: Focus on building rapport.

- Show a compelling title for the opportunity-switch masterclass: "How to ____ Without ____."
- Build rapport using the One Sentence Persuasion Formula:
 - Justify their failures: "It's not your fault low-carb diets did not work—they were never sustainable in the first place."
 - Allay their fears: "If you're worried you can't succeed, rest assured—you can with the right guidance."
 - Target the enemy: "Big corporations don't want you to win."
 - Confirm their suspicions: "You're right—the system was rigged against you."
 - Encourage their dreams: "You have a dream to make an impact, and this webinar will show you how."

Define the One Thing:

- Present the Big Domino, i.e. the new opportunity is the only way to achieve their greatest desires, e.g. "The only way to grow exponentially is through sales funnels, and the only way to build funnels is via ClickFunnels."
 - Tailor your message to the specific audiences, erring on the side of inclusivity. For example: "My goal for this presentation is to help 2 types of people. If you are [type 1] you'll get [desired result 1]. If you are [type 2] you'll get [desired result 2]."
- Share your Epiphany Bridge backstory on how you arrived at this realization. Recreate the emotional "aha" moment for the audience, linking back to where they're at now.
- Establish credibility by:
 - (i) Briefly sharing your achievements (both external results and personal transformation); and

KEY QUOTES

"The goal is always to help them to see that this new opportunity will give them their greatest desires, increase their status, and help them achieve their goals."

"[Persuading people] doesn't begin at the close, that begins the second you start talking."

"While it may seem like we're doing a lot in this script, there is just one goal: Get them to believe One Thing."

"If you knock down these three beliefs through the content section of the presentation, the Big Domino will fall and they will join your new opportunity."

- (ii) Sharing case studies to show the new opportunity works for other “ordinary” people, e.g. “Here’s what [real person] achieved in just [short timeframe].”

Present the 3 secrets to replace false beliefs with new ones.

- Introduce each secret with a curiosity-driven statement, followed by an Epiphany Bridge story to dismantle the false belief:
 - (i) Use this format: “You’re probably thinking [objection], right? Well, let me tell you a quick story...”
 - (ii) Conclude by stating the new belief as an undeniable truth, e.g. “Now you know how to ethically steal over $1,000,000 worth of funnel hacks for under $100...”
- Start with Secret #1 (vehicle belief), then repeat the process for Secret #2 (internal belief) and Secret #3 (external belief). You can use this approach to address as many associated beliefs as you wish, with a 30-60s story each. Once you topple the false beliefs, they will naturally embrace the Big Domino.
- Recap the 3 secrets and link them to the audience’s desired results. For example: “If you use Secret #1 to find a funnel, Secret #2 to build it, and Secret #3 to drive traffic, do you think you could succeed?”
- Use questions to smoothly transition to selling:
 - (i) “Who’s excited about what we covered, but feeling just a bit overwhelmed?” Use light humor to ease the mood and explain that you can’t cover everything in one session.
 - (ii) Then ask: “Is it okay if I take 10 minutes to show you a special offer to help you implement this?” Pause to let them agree before you proceed.

The stack slide is where the selling happens. People only recall the last thing they see, so show each item in your stack slide one by one, building up the perceived value and ensuring they remember the full offer—not just the last item—to make your package look irresistible.

KEY QUOTES

“The old belief pattern has been shattered, and you’ve installed a new one. And that’s the most powerful thing you can do as an educator and an expert.”

“You’re changing their world from I CAN’T to I CAN and I WILL. That’s the biggest gift you can give people—hope and belief in themselves.”

“This is not a teaching presentation; this is a presentation to inspire people and cause them to actually take action to change their lives. The teaching is what you do AFTER they have purchased.”

“The act of buying creates a commitment that causes them to actually take action.”

- Introduce the core offer, leading in to stack slide 1:
 - (i) Briefly explain what they will get over 6 weeks of masterclass.
 - (ii) Share 3 success stories and an inclusive statement, e.g. "This is for people who're already successful and want to multiply their results."
 - (iii) Address their #1 objection, then show the 1st stack slide with the value of the main offer (e.g. Masterclass worth $6,997).
- Introduce the 1st tool or tangible asset, leading in to stack slide 2:
 - (i) Explain the pain/cost you experienced to create the tool/asset and how it'll help them to save time/money.
 - (ii) Address the #1 objection about the tool/asset, then show the 2nd stack slide with the value of this tool (e.g. software worth $997) in addition to the main offer. Show the new total value.
- Repeat the same process for other tools/assets (e.g. templates, swipe files), progressively increasing the package's total value.

$ Round up all the offers and their combined value in the Big Stack Slide. Make sure the value is at least 10x the actual price.

- Show the total value of the package then use the if/all statement to ask: "If all this system did was [Secret #1 result], would it be worth $[total value]?" Repeat for all 3 secrets to get them to say "yes" 3 times.
- Get them to think on the result's worth, e.g. "You can see why people invest $10,997 for such results." Then, reveal your price today (e.g. $997) at a special discount.
- Explain that you had 2 choices—to sell as many courses as possible cheaply, or to offer a quality program for a slightly higher price—and you chose to deliver the best results.

KEY QUOTES

"The only thing prospects remember when you sell is the last thing you showed them."

"Usually there's a common reason people don't get started right away. It's the elephant in the room. Address it head-on so they don't keep thinking about it through the rest of your presentation."

"If they don't think the last thing you offered is worth the price, they simply won't buy."

"The more you can get them to say yes, the more likely they will accept the epiphanies you've shared with them and the offer presented."

"As I gained experience, I realized that the elements that come AFTER the initial price reveal are vitally important to closing the sale."

- Explain that they have 2 choices—to do nothing (and get nothing), or take a leap of faith with this offer. Point out how fast they'll recoup the investment even with half the expected results.
- Remove all risks with a 30-day money-back guarantee.
- Show the stack slide again to solidify the offer with scarce, limited-time bonuses.
- Close with a Q&A slide featuring: (i) a recap of the offer, (ii) a countdown timer, (iii) the final price and (iv) a CTA link or contact details.

Mastering Your Closes

 Brunson categorizes closes into 2 types:

- Trial closes are used every 60s or so, to prime the audience to say "yes" repeatedly. Use questions like: Is this making sense? Can you imagine if this happened to you? Who here wants a free copy of this? Isn't this cool? Have you heard this before? Are you ready to get started?
- Full closes happen at the end of the presentation. Brunson shares his 16 favorite closing strategies, such as:
 - (i) Positioning money as a tool for exchange, not something to hoard.
 - (ii) Painting a vivid picture of their life now vs what it could be.
 - (iii) Reassuring them they have all they need to succeed.
 - (iv) Helping them visualize the specific steps they'll take.
 - (v) Eliminating perceived risks with guarantees.

You can use the Perfect Webinar flow to promote your offer via email, or to launch a new product:

- 1st email/video: Share your Backstory Epiphany.
- 2nd email/video: Share the New Opportunity Epiphany.
- 3rd email/video: Share the Internal Belief Epiphany.
- 4th email/video: Share the External Belief Epiphany.

- 5th email/video: Share the Stack.

The Perfect Webinar script works for offers priced between $297-$2,997. However, high-ticket offers ($2,997-$100,000) require extra steps. Use personal calls to pre-screen and qualify prospects:

- Pre-qualify prospects by having them fill out an application form.
- Approved applicants then book a 30-minute call, during which you use 4 key questions to close the deal:
 - (i) "Why do you want to achieve this goal? Why is it important to you?" Seek to understand their internal/external goals. Reject prospects with vague goals or those you can't help.
 - (ii) "Why haven't you achieved this yet?" Aim to understand the obstacles, skills, or mindset gaps holding them back. Watch for red flags like blaming or lack of ownership.
 - (iii) "What skills/assets/resources can you use to overcome these challenges that you're not utilizing 100%?" Keep asking "what else" to help them realize untapped solutions and possibilities.
 - (iv) "Would you like me to help you achieve this?" If they say "yes", state your fee and deliverables. If affordability is an issue, offer a payment plan.

Build Your Funnel

Once your Perfect Webinar presentation is ready, the next step is to optimize and automate your process for attracting new leads and converting them into buyers.

Focus on 1 webinar, delivering it live weekly for a year to optimize it. Only automate your webinar after you have predictable results. Start a weekly rhythm, such as:

KEY QUOTES

"You want people who will take responsibility for their own actions."

"If you've done a good job with the questions, and they can afford your fee, then you should close most of the people you talk to."

- Mon–Wed: Promote the webinar.
 - (i) Drive traffic to a webinar page with curiosity-driven headlines (e.g. “How to__ without __”) and a registration deadline. Use static images as they convert better than videos.
 - (ii) People who register are taken to a thank-you page with the webinar details and a video that conveys your passion. You can use this page to sell related products (e.g. free trials or memberships).
 - (iii) Send emails to introduce your philosophy, build excitement for the webinar, and presell the 3 secrets. Explain each false belief and show how the webinar will prove it wrong. This boosts curiosity and ensures they show up.
 - (iv) Send email/text reminders the day before, 1 hour before, 15 minutes before, and when the webinar is live.
- Thu: Present live for 90 minutes (60min content + 30min pitch) with 15-30 min Q&A. Choose a day/time that suits your audience. Keep refining your closing rate to increase revenue.
- Fri–Sun: Start your post-sales the day after the webinar. Share the replay, summary and/or cheat-sheets, along with reminders of the time-limited offers/bonuses. Close the cart on Sunday at midnight.
- Repeat the cycle weekly for a year to improve your targeting and results.

The key to driving traffic is find where your ideal audience already is. The Dream 100 strategy helps you to multiply your results.

- Identify 100 key people or companies that control the traffic in your niche, such as influencers, bloggers, or podcasters.
- Start nurturing relationships with them by:
 - (i) Subscribing to their email list, engaging on their social accounts, and learning about their interests.
 - (ii) Providing a platform to promote their work and build rapport, e.g. interview them on your podcast/blog.
 - (iii) Offering unique solutions to help them achieve their goals.

KEY QUOTES

“If your registration page isn't converting well, it's because you're showing people too much and they assume they know the answer.”

“Buyers in motion tend to stay in motion...if they buy from you BEFORE the webinar, they are a lot more likely to buy from you ON the webinar.”

“Run it every week for a full year, and watch what happens to your bank account and your expert status.”

“If people think they have all the time in the world to buy, they won't.”

*“Dig your well before you're thirsty”
-Harvey Mackay*

“There is nothing worse than getting a meeting with an influencer and not knowing who they are, what they're working on, or what's important to them.”

- At the right time, promote your offer to them.
 - (i) Ask them to share your offer with their audience;
 - (ii) Target their audience through paid ads; and/or
 - (iii) Partner with them by integrating your offer into their funnels, thank-you pages, or email campaigns.

Other Details in the Book to Look out For

You already have the potential to make a massive impact on people's lives. You just have to get clear on the audience you wish to serve, create a unique opportunity, get results with a beta group, craft the right offer, and master the art of storytelling.

This book provides a step-by-step guide to help you start your expert business, including numerous real-life examples, success stories, sample scripts and templates for sales presentations, emails, and webinars. For more details, visit <https://expertsecrets.com>.

About the Author

Russell Brunson is a serial entrepreneur, author, speaker, and digital marketing expert. He is the co-founder of ClickFunnels, a SaaS platform that helps businesses create highly effective sales funnels. Over the past 2 decades, Brunson has helped thousands of entrepreneurs scale their businesses and achieve financial freedom. He is the author of the bestselling Secrets Trilogy—DotCom Secrets, Expert Secrets, and Traffic Secrets—which provides actionable strategies for online success.

KEY QUOTES

"The WORST time to contact your Dream 100 is the day you need them to promote something for you. The best time to start building relationships is NOW."

"Your message has the ability to change people's lives, so use it."